

From the Chaplain's corner

With the Feast of Jesus' Ascension next week we rejoice in celebrating Jesus' complete and utter faithfulness to his humanity. Maybe it prompts us to look at how we live our humanity. Does God need our humanity? Yours? Mine? In a word, YES! As we gradually uncover and act from our true selves, as Jesus did, we become more and more true expressions of God in our world. With God's grace, we discover what it means to remain faithful to our humanity as Jesus remained faithful to his. But, as Rahner reminds us, when we really carry on Jesus' life in our own way, and not by trying to produce a poor literal copy, is the following of Christ worth living and really interests God, and has the power to win eternity with Jesus. (Spiritual Exercises) Jesus becomes what he is supposed to be in his humanity and makes God's presence available in our world. As our brother, Jesus encourages us to live our lives just as faithfully. The wonderful Jewish theologian, Abraham Heschel, explains God's need for our humanity this way: In aiding a creature, we are helping the Creator. In succouring the poor, we fulfil a concern of God. In promoting the right, we are directing things toward God's a will; in which all aims must terminate... the glory of our devotion to the good becomes a treasure of God on earth. (The Pious One) Jesus' ascension gives us good reason to celebrate.
